PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

The other night, Betsy Scott called me to ask me some questions about our delegate to the National Convention. In the course of our conversation, she inquired as to how we were doing. This was the first time I had really thought about our accomplishments this far. We have had good attendance at our meetings, great speakers, and some new members. We all need to take pride in these accomplishments and use these to give us the drive to continue on with greater attendance percentages, and more new members. Wouldn't it be great if we could get 100% attendance at our meetings? It's achievable, with just a little effort on the part of each of us.

On a separate note, I have been participating in Dale Carnegie for the last six weeks, and while I couldn't share with you all the principles I have learned, I thought that maybe as we head into the holiday season some of the worry/stress principles would be appropriate to share. If you have had this course, you will note that this list is not all inclusive, but appropriate as we deal with the stress of the season. The list includes the following:

1. "Don't fuss about trifles."
2. "Don't fuss about the past."
3. "Fill your mind with thoughts of peace, courage, health, and hope."
4. "Count your blessings -- not your troubles"

While these are only 5 out of a list of about 20, keeping these in mind may help us survive and truly enjoy the upcoming season.

As we start into November and the holiday season, let's not forget to count one of the "blessings" we all share, and that is the professional friends we have developed through our association with ASWA.

Nancy Campbell
President
